One Man's Story

My wife and I had two children. We'd been having sexual difficulties. After a long period of sexual avoidance, we spontaneously and mysteriously enjoyed each other fully. She became pregnant and fearing that the new life would upset for good the long-awaited renewed intimacy, we "reluctantly" decided to have the abortion.

That was eleven years ago. The pre-existing problem with marital intimacy - far from getting better - has worsened since the abortion. My wife's body does not seem so inviting and nurturing and I also feel I don't have the "right" to enjoy the pleasure love-making once brought since the abortion.

Were it not for my renewed faith in God's love and mercy toward me, my loathing for what I did would likely long ago have caused me to take my life - but that would only compound an already abominable sin. I would do anything (if God would accept the bargain) to reverse that fateful mistake.

I sought and received God's forgiveness, after which my faith re-awakened and deepened. I became active in a pro-life movement as volunteer and contributor in trying to save pre-born persons. I've become a less selfish person, giving my time and efforts to forgotten, marginal persons in our society because their lives DO have value.
